The "Ntumbachushi Mountains" are more commonly known for the prominent Ntumbachushi Falls located on the Muchinga escarpment in Zambia's Luapula Province in Kawambwa district. While there isn't a mountain range with that specific name, the falls cascade over the edge of the plateau and are framed by a beautiful landscape of quartzite ridges and rocky outcrops. The name Ntumbachushi translates to "The Mountain of Smoke," referring to the mist generated by the powerful waterfalls during the rainy season.
